EUROPE IS WARNED ON NUCLEAR FORCES

Special to The New York Times

CPYRGHT BONN, July 16 -- Senator

FRANK Church said today that further diffusion of atomic weapons in national deterrents would force the United States to withdraw from Europe.

The Idaho Democrat voiced his warning at a public-affairs conference organized by the Evangelical Church at Tutzing, in Bavaria.

Senator Church, who is considered to be close to the Administration, emphasized that he was setting forth a personal opinion. In West Germany two weeks ago, President Kennedy promised that the United States would stay in Europe "as long as desired and required."

Mr. Church said:

"The present tendency toward diffusion of national control of atomic weapons--if it is not stopped--will some day force the United States to withdraw from Europe. Time is running out for the NATO alliance."

The Senator urged Europe to select one of two "rational" alternatives to meet the problem of security in an age of inter-continental missiles. The better solution would be to continue reliance upon the United States, he said, but if this was no longer tolerable Europe should establish its own integrated nuclear force.
